From Their Royal Majesties

Unto the beloved populace of the fair Kingdom of Caid, do We send greetings and Our heartfelt thanks.

In these past weeks We have had the great privilege of traveling throughout Our kingdom and witnessing once again the strength, generosity, and vibrant spirit of Our people. Time and again, We are reminded that the true glory of Caid does not rest solely upon the lists or within the halls of court, but within the dedication and fellowship of the populace who bring these gatherings to life.

At the Calafia/Gyldenholt Friendship Tournament, We saw the joy that comes when neighboring lands gather together in camaraderie. Fighters crossed blades in honorable contest while laughter and fellowship filled the pavilions. It was a day that beautifully reflected the bonds of friendship that strengthen our kingdom.

At Caid Crown Tournament, We witnessed the highest ideals of chivalry displayed upon the field. Each combatant fought with courage and honor, striving not only for victory but for the privilege of serving this kingdom and its people. Such displays remind Us why the traditions of Caid endure and inspire.

Our travels then brought Us northward to celebrate the Starkhafn Anniversary, where We were warmly welcomed by a community whose hospitality and dedication shine brightly. The continued growth and vitality of Starkhafn stands as a testament to the hard work of its people and their love for the Dream.

We also had the pleasure of attending the Consort's Champion Equestrian, where the grace, discipline, and remarkable partnership between rider and horse were on full display. The skills demonstrated in the equestrian field reflects the passion and commitment of those who cultivate this noble art within our kingdom.

Finally, We joined the celebration of the Nordwache Anniversary, another joyful gathering that highlighted the enduring strength of our local groups and the volunteers who sustain them.

While each of these events was remarkable in its own way, what impressed Us most deeply was the dedication of those who worked tirelessly behind the scenes to make them possible.

To the autocrats who organized and guided these gatherings,
To the marshals who ensured the lists were safe and honorable,
To the heralds whose voices carried across the fields,
To the artisans, performers, and teachers who enriched the day with their talents,
To the cooks, water bearers, retainers, gate staff, and volunteers who labored long before the first guests arrived and long after the final farewells were said—

We offer Our sincere gratitude.

It is through your efforts that the Dream thrives.

A kingdom is not built by crowns alone, but by the countless hands and generous hearts of those who give their time, skill, and passion in service to something greater than themselves. Caid continues to flourish because of you.

Know that your service, your artistry, your courage, and your fellowship do not go unnoticed. We are deeply grateful to stand among such a remarkable populace.

May the fires of the Dream continue to burn brightly throughout the lands of Caid, and may we gather again and again in joy, friendship, and shared purpose.

With Our thanks and affection,
Your Crown of Caid,

Wilhelm
Rex

Lorissa
Regina

From the Kingdom Seneschal

Greetings, Caid!

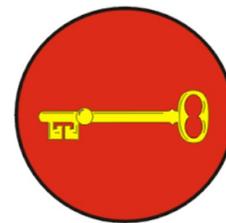

This April reaches an early peak with Crown Tournament. Please note per Kingdom Law that all participants, both combatant and consort, must be present for all significant points in the tournament. "Major points of the event include invocation of the lists, swearing of fealty, the quarter-final, semi-final, and final rounds of combat, and closing court. This requirement may be excused by the Crown at their sole discretion." Next, the newly crowned heirs are expected to be present at Privy Council the following day.

For those who have never participated, Privy Council is a business meeting to communicate the state of the kingdom to Their Royal Majesties and Highnesses; it is open to all who may wish to attend (casual modern attire). Portions of the event may be broadcast live on Discord and meeting notes are taken, but it is a unique experience to attend in person. If you are interested in operational functions of the kingdom, please join us the day after Crown Tourney in Naevehjem.

For those looking ahead to May, consider a unique event held in the Barony of Western Seas, a Medieval Murder Mystery: Take 2, and the Barony of Angels' St. Jude's Fundraiser Tourney. Both events should be something special.

I look forward to discovering who will be Their Majesties' heirs as I wish the best that Fate and Fortune has to offer to all who enter the lists.

In service to the Crown, Kingdom and Society,
Sir Philip
Kingdom Seneschal

From the Kingdom Chronicler

Greetings, Caid!

We are heading into that time of year, again; where things start heating up with both the thermometer and with events. This month we get to look forward to another display at the Crown Tournament. Which I am sure will be an event no one will want to miss. I know the last one was entertaining and was a great display of showmanship and drama as well as chivalry and sportsmanship. Honestly, a great time. And, of course, we cannot forget the Privy Council afterwards. That is where all the details are discussed and the machine gets oiled. So to speak. I enjoy hearing all the updates from every corner of our kingdom and hearing each branch that makes this game run so smoothly.

Furthermore, there are other fun events coming up this month including a Friendship Tournament and many baronial anniversaries to celebrate! Plus, let us not forget to mention the larger events because it is never too early to start preparing for camping events.

This month will be fun and I look forward to seeing you all out there. Also, I still love seeing all of your photos and would love more bardic pieces if you are wanting to share.

In Service to Crown, Kingdom, and Society,
Lady Amoða Kristinsdóttir
Kingdom Chronicler of Caid

From the 17th Bard of CAID

Greetings good gentles of the most shining and majestic Kingdom of Caid!

It is I, Beorn of the Northern Sea, 17th Bard of Caid and ancient performer. As my mind wanders, my eyesight fails me, and my hearing descends further and further into what can only be described as listening to Throat Singing submerged in two feet of brackish water, I must needs begin the process of choosing my successor.

To that end, the following dates have been chosen for each in-person round:

Round 1-(Best use of three words given onsite) Nordwache Anniversary, 04/25/26

Round 2-(Your best war performance) Potrero War, 05/24/26

Round 3-(Period performance for fun and entertainment) Lyondemere Anniversary, 06/13/26

The Final Round-Coronation, 07/11/26

Each round has a hard time limit of 5 minutes.

Each round may be entered digitally, however the deadline for each online submission will be 11:59pm the Friday preceding the performance time in question. Miss the deadline and the submission will not count. The digital performance for Round One will be given three different words than those onsite at Nordwache. ALL digital submissions and/or questions or correspondence must be sent to: baron.beorn@gmail.com.

After three rounds (dropping the lowest score), the final three performers with the highest scores will compete at Coronation in Gyldenholt, July 2026. The new, 18th Bard of Caid, will be presented to Their Majesties in afternoon court.

I look forward to hearing all of the participants!

In Service to Crown and Kingdom, I remain, ever faithfully,

Beorn, Bard of Caid

Ancient Wine in the Aegean regions

By: HRM Wilhelm Skallagrimsson

INTRODUCTION TO ANCIENT WINE IN THE AEGEAN

Wine has long held significant importance in the Aegean region, particularly in ancient Greece. This area, known for its stunning islands and rich history, was not only a center for trade but also a cradle of cultural practices surrounding wine. In ancient Greece, wine was more than a drink; it was a symbol of social status, a key component of religious rituals, and a common feature of daily life. The Aegean, with its favorable climate and fertile soil, provided ideal conditions for grape cultivation, leading to a thriving wine industry that contributed to both the economy and the cultural landscape.

Communities would gather to celebrate harvest festivals, honor the god Dionysus, and engage in symposiums—feasts where philosophical discussions and social bonding often took place, all centered around wine. This beverage fostered connections among people, serving as a bridge between the mundane and the divine.

With this context in mind, as we explore the different types of wine produced in this ancient world, it becomes clear that both red and white wines played unique roles in society. Each type offered distinct flavors and characteristics, making them suitable for various occasions and preferences. The evolution of these wines reflects the broader narratives of trade, agriculture, and social customs in the Aegean, setting the stage for a deeper understanding of their respective significance in ancient Greek life.

TYPES OF WINE: RED VS. WHITE

In ancient Aegean culture, red and white wines were distinguished by their distinct characteristics and the cultural roles they played. Red wine, made from dark-skinned grape varieties, is notable for its rich color and robust flavors, often described as deep and earthy, with notes of berries and spices. According to a brochure on modern Greek white wine, these wines are often noted for their aromatic, floral qualities and lively citrus flavors, providing a lighter, crisper profile compared to red wine, which was traditionally favored at festive gatherings for its boldness and symbolic role in uniting communities. Wine was commonly enjoyed at social gatherings such as the Greek symposium, where it accompanied discussions, entertainment, and intimate celebrations, reflecting its important role in both communal and more personal occasions, according to the World History Encyclopedia contexts.

In contrast, white wine was favored for its lighter, crisper profile. Made from green or yellowish grapes, it offered a refreshing taste, often highlighting citrus and floral notes. According to Greece High Definition, wine was an important part of daily life for the ancient Greeks. It was consumed regularly for natural hydration, with water added depending on the time of day.

The differences between red and white wines in the Aegean region reveal individual taste preferences and broader social customs. According to Elena Martín González, communal wine drinking was a key leisure activity in Archaic Greek society, often reflecting cultural practices and the nature of social gatherings. These distinctions show how wine types were closely linked to cultural expectations and event settings. As we examine the spices and flavors added, the intention behind each choice becomes even clearer.

SPICES AND FLAVOR PROFILES

In ancient Greece, the art of winemaking was not solely about grapes; it also involved carefully selecting spices to enhance wine flavor. According to chemical residue and DNA analyses referenced in a 2025 study, wines in the ancient Mediterranean—including the Aegean region—were commonly spiced and sometimes resonated, confirming that adding spices and aromatics to wine was an established practice during that time. These additions could transform a simple wine into a more intricate beverage, appealing to the palate in exciting ways.

The impact of spices on wine flavor was significant, as they could alter the overall taste experience. For example, the inclusion of honey alongside spices created a sweeter, more harmonious blend, popular among the elite during feasts and celebrations. According to Greek Reporter, regions within the Aegean showed differences in spice use, influenced by local agriculture, trade routes, and the importation of spices such as cumin from Asia, which were incorporated into local cuisine.

As these flavors were enjoyed during gatherings, they also held deeper cultural significance. The careful selection of spices reflected the host's social status and the nature of the event. This lays the foundation for understanding how the use of spices in ancient Greek wine not only enriched the drink itself but also contributed to the social fabric surrounding communal experiences, paving the way for further exploration of the cultural and social implications of wine in this vibrant society.

CULTURAL AND SOCIAL IMPLICATIONS OF WINE

Wine in the Aegean was more than just a drink; it shaped cultural and social practices in profound ways. In religious rituals, wine served as a sacred offering, believed to connect worshippers with the divine. It was common in ceremonies dedicated to gods like Dionysus, where wine symbolized joy and rejuvenation. This spiritual significance fostered a sense of community among participants, reinforcing bonds as they shared in worship.

In daily life, wine was a staple at meals and social gatherings, reflecting the status and lifestyle of those who served it. Celebrations such as weddings, festivals, and communal feasts prominently featured wine, thereby signaling the host's wealth and generosity. According to Mark Cartwright, the symposium was a key social event in ancient Greek culture, in which men gathered in private homes to drink, eat, and sing together, fostering a shared, convivial atmosphere that strengthened relationships.

Wine also served as a symbol in Aegean culture, representing hospitality and friendship. Offering wine to guests was a sign of respect and welcome. As these practices flourished, they contributed to a vibrant society that valued social interaction and community bonding. Building on these foundations, understanding the social implications of wine sets the stage for examining its economic aspects, revealing how these cultural customs influenced trade and the development of the Aegean wine industry.

TRADE AND ECONOMY OF AEGEAN WINE

The trade and economy surrounding Aegean wine were significant drivers of growth and development in ancient societies. With its rich flavors and cultural importance, wine became a sought-after commodity, leading to the establishment of trade networks that extended across the Mediterranean. The demand for Aegean wine extended to various regions, facilitating exchanges not only of goods but also of ideas and cultural practices. Greek colonies, such as Pharos and Issa, became central to these trading operations, exporting locally produced wines while importing necessary resources and luxury items (Miše & Quinn, 2022).

The economic impact of the wine trade was felt deeply in local communities. Revenue from wine exports supported settlement growth and enabled investment in infrastructure, such as roads and ports, thereby improving market access. This interdependence between wine production and local economies fostered cooperation among traders and producers, leading to the exchange of techniques and innovations in winemaking.

The establishment of trade routes further intensified these exchanges, connecting the Aegean islands with mainland Greece and other Mediterranean regions. Merchants transported wines using amphorae, navigating complex maritime routes to reach distant markets. This blend of trade and cultural interaction shaped Aegean identity, laying the groundwork for winemaking traditions that continue to influence modern practices. Understanding this historical context enriches our appreciation of how ancient methods and ideas have shaped contemporary winemaking and the ongoing legacy of Aegean wine culture. (Miše & Quinn, 2022) The text outlines a range of scholarly contributions to the study of Roman amphorae, focusing on their production, distribution, and archaeological significance, primarily in the Mediterranean region. (Miše & Quinn, 2022)

INFLUENCE ON MODERN WINEMAKING

The influence of ancient Aegean winemaking techniques on modern practices is both notable and enduring. Today's winemakers often look to the past to guide their methods, embracing the legacy of these early vintners. Many modern vineyards still employ traditional techniques, such as foot-treading grapes and the use of clay amphorae for fermentation, which were common in ancient Aegean wine production. These methods not only honor the ancient craft but also enhance the flavor profiles of modern wines, offering a taste that connects consumers to centuries of history.

Contemporary winemakers are also interpreting ancient grape varieties, reviving nearly forgotten cultivars that thrived in the Aegean. This resurgence reflects a growing interest in biodiversity and authenticity in wine production. By focusing on local grape varieties, winemakers create wines that are distinct to their regions, echoing the practices of ancient producers who valued the unique characteristics of their land.

As these ancient traditions continue to inspire modern techniques, they also remind us of the shared cultural bond that wine fosters. The connections formed over a glass of wine have persisted through time, enriching social interactions and community gatherings. In this way, our ongoing relationship with wine serves as a bridge connecting the past to the present, leading us to appreciate the enduring legacy of Aegean wine as we explore its lasting impact on contemporary culture.

CONCLUSION: THE ENDURING LEGACY OF AEGEAN WINE

The legacy of Aegean wine attests to its significant role in shaping cultures and traditions that continue to resonate today. Throughout this exploration, we have seen how ancient winemaking practices laid the groundwork for the rich wine culture that thrives in the Aegean region. The distinctions between red and white wines, enhanced by spices and unique flavor profiles, contributed to a diversity that not only satisfied palates but also marked important social and religious moments.

Wine has been a powerful connector, fostering relationships and communal experiences. Its presence in rituals and gatherings signifies a bond that transcends time, reflecting the joys and sorrows of life. The cultural impact of Aegean wine extends well beyond ancient practices; it has woven itself into the fabric of modern society. Today's winemakers draw inspiration from these historical methods, seeking to honor the past while crafting wines that tell stories of heritage and tradition.

Looking ahead, future research can further illuminate the ways ancient practices influence contemporary winemaking, perhaps uncovering forgotten techniques or regional nuances that enhance our understanding. The enduring legacy of Aegean wine serves as a reminder of the shared human experience, allowing us to appreciate how a simple drink can encapsulate centuries of culture, connection, and community. Through wine, we continue to celebrate the history and traditions that define us, ensuring that the story of Aegean wine lives on.
