From Their Royal Majesties

Greetings unto Our populace,

Life has been crazy this past summer and so very hot! We are so grateful to everyone who has come out to events but understand that life and health comes first.

Highland War was so much fun! We got Our fight on in the morning, enjoyed delicious iced coffee, and got to give out some well-deserved awards. Unfortunately, Her Majesty was affected by the heat, and We were unable to return on Sunday.

As We pen this missive, We are preparing for Crown. As you read it, it will be behind Us and We will have Heirs! We will also be in the throes of GWW! So many of Our royal cousins will also have heirs and We are so excited to meet them.

We have been blessed by good health and minimal impact from the heat and wish that for all of you. A gentle reminder to come when you can, do what you can and HAVE FUN!

As always, We are ever mindful of the fact that We rule because you believe.

Yours, In Service to the Dream

From the Kingdom Seneschal

Greetings!

Great Western War is upon us! As always, the event can only happen with the hard work and hours of people volunteering their time and skills to the event. If you have a spare hour or two, please contact the Volunteer Stewards and see how you can help—volunteers.steward@gww.sca-caid.org.

In addition, my term as Kingdom Seneschal will be drawing to a close in January. In preparation for the transition and as required by Kingdom Law, I am formally announcing that Sir Philip Williams of Aston will be stepping into the office during Their Majesties final court at January Coronation. I am confident he is well qualified for the position and he has the endorsement of both Their Royal Majesties and the Society Seneschal.

In Service,
Master Laertes McBride
Kingdom Seneschal

From the Kingdom Chronicler

Greetings unto Caid!

Here it is! Great Western War is upon us! And, much like a toddler or an overly affectionate furry pet, if it is upon us, we are overheating! Please remember to hydrate, wear plenty of sunscreen and/or stay in the shade whenever possible and take frequent breaks while working in the sun.

We just had our Crown List and no doubt there were many fine bouts in honor of serving as the Sovereign and Consort of Caid. Cheers to the victors! We have resumed having Privy Council the day afterwards, which given how many things the Crown needs to be aware of, seems like a good way to get the incoming couple ready and able!

Finally, a friendly reminder that we have a date for the next Pentathlon! It will be held on March 15th, 2025, and if you haven't started getting your artistic endeavors completed, why not start now? Good luck and happy Arting!

In Service to Kingdom and Society, I remain,

FIVE EVERYDAY HELLENISTIC GREEK DISHES

By Duke Wilhelm Skallagrimsson, KSCA

The Hellenistic period, which spanned from the death of Alexander the Great in 323 BCE to the conquest of Egypt by Rome in 30 BCE, was a time of great cultural exchange and innovation in Ancient Greece. Greek cuisine underwent significant changes during this era, influenced by various cultures and regions. This essay will explore five everyday Hellenistic Greek dishes that provide insights into daily life during that era.

During the Hellenistic period, the diet of the ordinary people consisted mainly of grains such as barley and wheat, vegetables like onions and garlic, legumes including lentils and chickpeas, fruits like figs and olives, fish from nearby seas and rivers, cheese made from goat's or sheep's milk, honey as a sweetener, and wine as a popular beverage (Cartledge & Spawforth, 2002). These ingredients formed the basis for numerous culinary creations reflecting local traditions and foreign influences.

The first dish we will discuss is "Kolokythokeftedes": fried zucchini balls. To prepare this dish, grated zucchini is mixed with breadcrumbs (made from stale bread), feta cheese for added flavor, onions for aroma, herbs such as dill or mint for freshness, and eggs to bind everything together (Rodrigues, et al., 2019). The mixture is then shaped into small balls before being fried until golden brown. Kolokythokeftedes were popular among ordinary people and considered an integral part of festive occasions due to their delicious taste and appetizing appearance (Gourmetsleuth.com).

Moving on to our second dish called "Melitouta": a sweet syrup made with honey. This delicacy involved boiling honey and water until it thickened into a syrupy consistency (Fleming & Robeson-McQuillan, 2018). Melitouta was often consumed during religious ceremonies and special celebrations, symbolizing prosperity and abundance (Foodandtraditions.com).

Our third dish is "Dolmathes,": or stuffed grape leaves. This popular dish consists of wrapping a mixture of rice, ground meat (usually lamb or beef), onions, herbs such as mint or parsley, and spices in grape leaves (Hemsworth & Ashbrook, 2019). Dolmathes were cherished for their unique taste and served as a versatile snack that could be enjoyed on various occasions.

Our fourth dish was called "Tiganites,": which were Greek pancakes. These pancakes were made by combining flour with milk, eggs, sugar, or honey for sweetness and olive oil for richness (Cain, et al., 2020). Tiganites were commonly eaten at breakfast or as a dessert. They were often topped with honey. We alternatively sprinkled it with cinnamon for added flavor.

Finally, we have the fifth dish, "Spanakopita,": a savory pie filled with spinach and feta cheese. To prepare this dish, sautéed spinach is mixed with feta cheese and aromatic herbs such as dill or parsley before being encased in layers of phyllo pastry (Cartwright, 2018). Spanakopita was appreciated for its scrumptious combination of flavors and is considered a staple at communal meals, like weddings or festivals, due to its ability to feed large gatherings.

Several similarities and differences appear when comparing these five Hellenistic Greek dishes discussed above. Firstly, they all showcase the abundant use of fresh ingredients found locally, such as vegetables like zucchini and spinach. Secondly, they incorporate elements from other cultures through ingredients like honey, or cooking techniques like frying, borrowed from neighboring civilizations (Cartledge & Spawforth, 2002). Lastly, each dish has its own distinct cultural or social significance, whether it is the festive appeal of Kolokythokeftedes or the religious connotations associated with Melitouta.

These dishes reflect broader trends in Hellenistic Greek cuisine by highlighting the fusion of different culinary traditions and the elevation of simple ingredients through diverse cooking techniques. They showcase how food sustains people and plays a vital role in their social gatherings and religious ceremonies (Cartledge & Spawforth, 2002). These dishes provide valuable insights into daily life during the Hellenistic period, illustrating both its diversity and interconnectedness.

In conclusion, Greek cuisine underwent significant changes during the Hellenistic period, influenced by various cultures and regions. The five everyday Hellenistic Greek dishes discussed in this essay shed light on the daily lives of ordinary people during that era. From zucchini balls to honey syrup, stuffed grape leaves to pancakes, and savory spinach pie, each dish offers a unique glimpse into the culinary traditions and customs of Ancient Greece. These dishes satisfied hunger and brought people together in celebration and ritual, making them an integral part of Hellenistic society.

EXCHEQUER REPORT

From the Office of the Exchequer, Greeting!

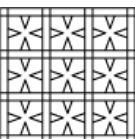

The past year has been good to the Kingdom's coffers, as we seem to be back to normal after the Great Plague. Our current balance is a result of many donations (Thanks you all!) that came in, as well as income from events. Expenses are going up everywhere, and income is the same, or sometimes lower, then it was a few years ago, to no one's surprise.

We also made a decision to make Collegium free this year. This was in an effort to make it more accessible to those who are younger and can't afford some events. Collegium, it was reasoned, would be a great event for newcomers to learn and mingle with more experienced members. Alas, our expectations did not come to fruition. Although we had a good showing, the number of people under 30 that came to the event could be counted on one hand. Thus, It is unlikely this event will be free again, given the large financial hit we took.

By the time you read this our next Prince & Princess will have been determined, and Great Western War will be upon us. Great feasting and drink will be had, I'm sure.

One last note- I am looking for a deputy for the office of the kingdom exchequer. Someone with some financial experience is preferred. Anyone interested can reach out to me: exchequer.officer@sca-caid.org

Ingredients of the day are coffee and/or cherries, which are favorites of the B&B. Champion will be chosen by populace vote.
