Barony of Gryphon's Lair

The Return of Midge Marsh Melee, aka Baronial Birthday September 6-8, 2024 Huntsville, UT

Way back in the days of yore of the Barony of Gryphon's Lair, scattered amongst the tournament events, as everything was tournament events at that time, Gryphon's Lair fighters wanted to beat each other with sticks in groups. Thus, was formed our first melee event. It was held at the Willard Campground, where we were swarmed by midges. Therefore, for many years following we commemorated that event by calling it Midge Marsh Melee. Basically, we want to get together and hit each other with stuff in groups. There will be a birthday party, there will be a burger burn, there will be two tournaments (I know I know, ironic) one being our heavy champion and one being our rapier champion. If we can find targets we MIGHT do Thrown Weapons. The rest of the day will be melee. Bring your good kit and be prepared to beat your friends.

Random Carp that I have Learned...

A look at modern practices and their medieval sources

William Blackfox Award Honorable Mention A.S. 50, 51,

William Blackfox Award Nominee A.S. 45, 52, 53

Talking about something a bit indelicate (not like it's stopped me before), the important moving subject of... movements (as in the bowel kind). That really hasn't changed, but the cleaning up afterward has. Since Charmin isn't an age-old company, what preceded it? The Greeks had ostraca, small pottery disks used for scraping. They would sometimes make them with names of enemies written on them. When not used for this task, they were also used when voting people out of town, leading to the word "ostracize." The Romans used sponges on the end of a stick, and their seats had a hole in front to stick through to do the cleaning. All good, except the community vase of vinegar in the corner where the communal sponges were stored.

The Japanese had just a stick (literally called a s@!# stick), and most elsewhere used (and still uses) just water (yay for bidet!) The Chinese (not surprisingly) started with paper around the year 500, which caught on as a great idea across the world, but dedicated paper to the task was a long time coming. For many years, last year's Farmer's Almanac slowly replaced corn cobs in the States. It wasn't until 1935 that splinter-free toilet paper became available. Splinter-free? 1935? Now you really know more random carp.
