Greetings Calontir!

I am excited to introduce you to my new emergency replacement deputy, The Honorable Lady Isibel Edvinsdottir. She will be covering for me should something ever happen where I am unable to do the duties of my office. She will also be assisting with some of the administrative parts of the office. I am so glad to have her on the team. Please be sure to thank her for her willingness to serve when you see her! This month I also want to call attention to a topic that is very important to our survivability, being a positive part of our local communities. The more we are a part of the local areas we live in, the better our recruitment, retention, and overall perception efforts will be.

Things as simple as doing volunteer workdays for the sites we use for meetings, practices, and events show how grateful we are to those places that support our game. This helps us not lose those sites when new leadership takes over in the places. It also allows us a chance to create a strong relationship which may attract someone to our group that would have never looked for us before. Not to mention, it can be fun. Nothing like rolling up our collective sleeves for a good cause. It is what we do after all.

Another opportunity would be supporting local charity drives. Whether it be doing a day at a soup kitchen, assisting with collections of canned goods for a food drive, or clothes for a clothing drive. All those things are huge benefits to our homes and our communities. The best way to become part of our communities is to be a part of our communities. A couple hours a month, quarter, or even year can help our reputation. Which in turn can afford us new sites to hold practices, meetings, events, etc. Which will then grant us new opportunities for recruitment.

In service to Crown, Kingdom, and the Dream,

Ottar Surtson
Office of the Chatelaine, Kingdom of Calontir

Ciao a tutti!

Kingdom Arts & Sciences is coming up on November 4th in The Shire of Crescent Moon! If you aren't familiar with Kingdom Arts and Sciences, it's an opportunity for the scientists and artisans of the Kingdom to share their projects and get feedback. Kingdom A&S is broken into 2 parts. There are tri-levels where you can enter at whatever level you want (novice, intermediate, or advanced) and Championships. Championship entries must comprise of 3 advanced level entries of 3 different categories. For example, a plate, a food item, and leatherwork, but an under dress, main dress, and coat are not 3 different categories. Kingdom A&S is open to everyone regardless of what awards you have, so Lilies, Hammers, and Laurels are invited to enter, and entrants do not need a sponsor. Each entry will have a judging session with 3 judges to discuss your project.

Sign up to enter and/or judge will be open from September 15th through October 25th. Yes, you may sign up to enter a project and judge. There are no prerequisites (specific awards) to be a judge. It's a fantastic way to see what others are looking for when reviewing entries or see how others present their projects. You don't need to be an expert in a field to sign up to judge. Some of the best judges are those who are new to a topic because they ask great questions and have a different perspective. We will be using the same criteria that we are already familiar with. This can be found in the A&S section of the Kingdom's website.

Additionally, we need a new head of the Scribal Guild. If you are interested, please email your letter of interest to artssciences@calontir.org by October 14th.

In service,
Gianna

Gianna Viviani
Calontir Minister of Arts and Sciences

Greetings all.

I hope everyone had a great time at Pennsic. I certainly did, though the road home was harder than expected.

Now we turn our eyes to the coronation of David de la Cloude and Rhianwen ferch Bran ap Gruffydd. By the way, if you're interested, David's arms are "Argent, in pale two clouds gules," which is a great usage of heraldry in combination with his name. Rhianwen's arms are "Azure, on a pile throughout argent between two flames Or a seahorse contourny maintaining an ax gules."

"Contourny," means the animal is facing the right of the shield as seen by the observer, which means it's to the left, or sinister of the shieldbearer. This is entirely appropriate for Rhianwen.

Sinister is a fun word, but before we get there, let's get the business out of the way. I had hoped to finalize getting a couple of offices filled, but circumstances have just gotten in the way. I'll announce those next month. At this point, there are no open positions I'm advertising, but I'm sure there'll be more as time goes on.

That doesn't mean there's no way to contribute to Calontir's heraldry. Reach out to your local group herald or to anyone in the heraldic community and ask how you can help. I suggest, by the way, ask about helping in the area you're most interested in. Something like, "Hey, I'm interested in Middle Eastern names, can I help people research those?" is perfectly appropriate. You can always branch out later, but starting small is always a good thing.

Now on to the fun part, but I want to go over dexter, the opposite of sinister, first. This is right and proper, of course. That's because in heraldic terms "dexter" means to the right, or right hand. It also means "skillful," "fortunate," and "proper."

The etymology of this word goes all the way back to Proto-Indo-European, which means there are cognates in Ancient Greek, Old High German, Sanskrit, and Old Church Slavonic. You can also find it in Pompeian inscriptions as "dester."

I, of course, first encountered this word from starting to play Dungeons and Dragons in 1980. I'd never seen dexterity before, and I was curious.

It was, shall we say, a wandering encounter.

But we all want to know about sinister, I think. Its etymology is exactly what it should be: unclear. It comes to us from Proto-Italic, so not quite back to Proto-Indo-European, but other than that, they haven't traced it. There could be a relation to Sanskrit, but really, you could just say it comes from sinister origins.

Did you think you'd go through one of my Mews letters without a pun of such quality?

Anyway, it means left handed in heraldic terms, as I explained above. It also does mean "perverse," "bad," or "hostile." In Middle English, it came to mean "unlucky" and "inauspicious."

And this leads me to what I find most interesting about the word. This "inauspicious" meaning goes back at least partially to Ancient Greek religious usage. However, the ancient Romans, when using it in a religious context, used it to mean "auspicious." Literally, the opposite meaning.

So this makes me want to add another sport to the Olympics: Greco-Roman Word Wrestling! I'm sure it'll be a hit.

Rhodri

Greetings Calontir,

Coronation is upon us. It's such a trying time. Sad to see the current Crown go away, but excited to see what the future holds. Each reign renews the heart of the Kingdom, by adding to our story and, often, to our traditions. When I first came to Calontir there were no newcomer mugs handed out during court. Now I can't imagine a court without it. One of my favorite things is seeing all the new faces that are joining us.

While I will miss Their Royal Majesties Agamemnon and Marie, I am looking forward to Their Royal Majesties David and Rhianwen. New stories are waiting to be written, new songs are waiting to be sung.

The more things change the more they stay the same.

One thing that has remained the same all the many years I have been in the SCA is that the Kingdom Newsletter is the official publication. Many things must be published in the newsletter, although the list does change some depending on the kingdom. As one example, for the Crown to have their business be official (stuff like awards They give) is that the event must be on the published calendar (the one on the website IS NOT official) and the event flyer must be published prior to the event. Not on the calendar, no flyer - that award your friend got isn't official (there are ways to address this and make the award official, but it's just better to not have to use them).

It's easy, in this new age of electronic communication, to forget about the printed news (especially now that the printed newsletter often arrives electronically). But the kingdom newsletter is a vital part of how things work in the SCA and Calontir

Facebook is a fun way to keep up with family and friends, but not everyone has access, and it is really not a great way to make sure information is easy to find, especially when algorithms can push things you need to know out of your view.

Please read your kingdom and local newsletters, help create content for them, so they are more interesting to read, and encourage others to do the same. If you want more information about the newsletter requirements or how you can help, make them better feel free to ask. I'm happy to share information.

Ciao,

Giulia
