From Their Royal Majesties

Greetings from Their Royal Majesties, King Wigthehn & Queen Neassa,

We are excited and overjoyed to begin Our reign as the Monarchs for the Middle Kingdom. Our Kingdom and the people are always near and dear to Our hearts. Coronation was everything We hoped it would be and We thank all those who could attend and all those who hosted and worked the event itself.

For Our reign, We wish for all who are able to join Us on certain, what We are calling, "Pilgrimages". Our community extends beyond the borders of Our Great Kingdom and often We host visitors from other Kingdoms. We shall always be a Kingdom of hospitality and, to that end, We wish to make journeys to other Kingdoms. At the moment, We are planning to attend 100 Minute War in the Kingdom of the East and Gulf Wars in the Kingdom of Gleann Abhann.

Soon We will have Heirs and the succession of the Dragon Throne will be secure. Our Kingdom's Crown Tournaments truly shine as a magical moment of pageantry and splendor. A spectacle to behold, surely. The list of combatants and their consorts for this Tournament are noble and worthy indeed. We wish unto all the best of luck.

Ever Forward,

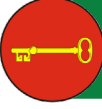

Wigthehn & Neassa

Letters from the Kingdom Officers

Seneschal

Welcome to Fall,

As we enjoy cooler weather, sweaters, fires and camaraderie, I would like to remind you all to play nice and share the toys.

Coming soon from the office of the Seneschal, updates about the Hamlet experiment and the limitations therein. And updates to the office and all the associated paperwork. We are working to get all the documents updated and in one easy-to-find location on the website. This will likely take months and may not be completed within my term of office, but it is work that needs to be done. Change can be hard but it is always necessary - entropy = death.

On that note I would like to commend the groups out there that are recruiting and growing; they are trying new things and it is working. There are people who would be happy to make the SCA their home, we just have to find the right way to reach them.

That's all I have. Stay warm, enjoy soup/apple cider/pumpkin spice season and the changing of the leaves.

Helewyse

Dragon Herald

Greetings, Midrealm!

It has been a BUSY post-Pennsic!

We have new Royalty in King Wigthehn and Queen Neassa. HUZAH!

Congratulations to Count Louis and Countess Sadb for their reign! They had a very busy summer reign and accomplished a lot during that time.

I want to thank all those heralds who have helped out and I encourage others to volunteer. I and many of the senior heralds are here to help those who wish to assist in the heraldic community; whether as voice heralds for Court or lists, or as consultation heralds helping with name or armorial registrations.

I also want to express my thanks to all the scribes who put forth an AMAZING amount of scrolls for the reign of Louis and Sadb. HUZAH to the scribes!

On a last note, we have just finished the third quarter reporting. The next report due is Domesday. This is the report that ALL heralds need to fill out. Without this report, you can not be a warranted herald and eligible to be a herald-in-charge of a Royal Court. Below is the reporting schedule:

Local and At-Large

Mar 31 (Q1), Jun 30 (Q2), Sep 30 (Q3), Dec 31 (Q4/Domesday)

Regional

Apr 14 (Q1), Jul 14 (Q2), Oct 14 (Q3), Jan 14 (Q4/Domesday)

Kindest regards,

Baron Gilebert le braceur de Dijon

Minister of Arts & Sciences

Hello!

Great gourds, the days are getting shorter and cooler! I hope you have taken some time to enjoy outdoor arts and sciences before the coming winter drives us indoors near the hearth.

I would love to hear about some of the projects you plan on working on over the dark months. I know I will spend some time at my loom and my wheel, and with my knitting needles. But there are many other projects that lend themselves well to indoor work.

Also, RUM approaches and I have had a sneak peek at the class list. It looks amazing! So many wonderful classes it will be hard to pick and choose which ones to attend. I hope to see you there!

Thank you!

Chronicler

Hello Midrealm,

I would like to officially welcome Lady Alys of Alnwick who is replacing me as the Pentamere Regional Chronicler! Additionally, I would also like to thank al-Mu'allima JahanAra bint al-Yehya amat al-Hafeeza for her time and efforts as Kingdom Chronicler and now as my deputy to assist with the transition.

Our office has need for additional volunteers. Currently the Office of the Chronicler has open positions for Regional Chroniclers in both North Oaken and South Oaken. As a regional chronicler, your job is to assist the Kingdom Chronicler by being a liaison for groups in your region, answering questions and assisting local chroniclers with publication duties and reports. This is not a publishing position. For more information, please see the Kingdom Job Openings page at midrealm.org.

Warmest Regards,

Baroness Sadb ingen Neill

Chronicler of the Middle Kingdom

Earl Marshal

Greetings,

I am pleased to announce that Forester Brigitta von Metten will be serving as the next Deputy for Thrown Weapons. She has a great vision for the office, and I am confident she will do a wonderful job.

My thanks to Forester Uthan Laoch for his long term as Deputy for Thrown Weapons. He did a wonderful job.

I have also been receiving reports of combatants failing to sign in at the list table or failing to get inspected. Every combatant needs to do both of these things before they fight. No exceptions. Getting your personal protection gear inspected helps protect you. Getting your weapons inspected protects your friends that you will try to hit/stab. Signing a waiver helps protect the Society. If this continues to be an issue, folks will start having their authorizations revoked.

Lastly, I want to stress how important it is for event marshals to make schedules and to share them. It helps generate excitement and helps folks plan their events better.

Stay safe out there!

Cellach

Earl Marshal of the Middle Kingdom

Blackwork Embroidery

by THL Lynne Fairchild

History of Double-Running Stitch (Blackwork) Embroidery

Through the Moorish occupation of Spain from 711-1492 A.D. and the Mamluk trade routes in Italy, blackwork embroidery became popular and spread throughout Europe in the 16th and 17th centuries. The technique of black, double-running, reversible stitch embroidery became extremely popular in England when it was displayed by King Henry VIII's first wife, Catherine of Aragon, and was dubbed 'Spanish work' in England. In Spain, Catherine had been born to the new Spanish monarchs, Isabella and Ferdinand. Having grown up learning the geometric embroidery, she continued her embroidery when she was sent to England to marry Henry VIII's older brother, Arthur, in 1501. After Arthur's death in 1502, Catherine married Henry in 1509. After King Henry VIII divorced Catherine, the embroidery was re-named 'blackwork' and 'Holbein stitch' (after Hans Holbein the Younger). By the time King Henry VIII's second daughter, Elizabeth I, came into reign, blackwork embroidery was popular among both nobility and monarchs. However, by Elizabeth's reign, blackwork had taken on a new look, which was curvilinear patterns with floral designs iconic of the late 16th century.

During the 16th century, blackwork embroidery had become popular in other countries besides England, such as France. Louis XI and Charles VIII of France were both very interested in embroidery and summoned Italian embroiderers to court, so early French work was much influenced by Italy. (Snook) Examples of blackwork embroidery in Scotland have not survived, except for in portraits, such as that of Agnes Keith and her husband, the Regent Moray, painted by Hans Eworth in 1561. (Swain) Found among the garments left by Mary, Queen of Scots were four English chemises with blackwork designs. Other countries also had blackwork, including Hungary, Yugoslavia, Serbia, Russia, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, and Romania. (Nickels) Each country took blackwork embroidery and put their own individual twist on it.

After this beautiful reversible embroidery was introduced to European countries and Catherine of Aragon helped to inspire its popularity, it was widely used during the 16th century before slowly going out of fashion in the 17th century, somewhere around 1630. Blackwork had been one of many ways for Europeans to display their wealth, as well as being fashionable. However, it soon became overshadowed by lace. Lace first started to make an appearance in the late 15th century and was brought to Zurich from Italy around 1536. By the mid-17th century when sumptuary laws began to relax and lace was no longer taxed, there was a demand on lace for anything and everything, from the edges of gloves to the edges of sashes and ruffs.

Materials and Methods Used During the Renaissance

European blackwork could have been found on almost any type of fabric: silk, linen, satin, velvet, and netting. Black silk on white linen was definitely the most favored in Europe. Occasionally, gold and silver threads may have been used to demonstrate visual drama. However, a person had to be careful when using gold or silver threads due to the sumptuary laws. Among the restrictions listed in Elizabeth I's 1574 statute was that for gold, silver, or pearl embroidery: it was reserved for only dukes, marquises, earls (including the children of all three), viscounts, barons, and Knights of the Garter. Other colors of thread were used too, but not as often. One example is the portrait of Bess of Hardwick from the 1550's, with both her sleeves and collar embroidered with red thread.

European shirts were the most common item to have blackwork as decoration, especially on the cuffs and around the neck. There are many portraits from the Elizabethan era of nobility wearing blackwork on the sleeves and cuffs of their shirts and chemises. By 1530, a man's shirt had a high neck, which had resulted in the origin of the ruff. Aside from ruffs, blackwork was commonly used on handkerchiefs, coifs, doublets, night-caps, and falling-bands. There is an example of blackwork embroidery on a stomacher at the V&A Museum in London.

The technique used to create blackwork is quite simple. Over the centuries, blackwork has also been referred to as Holbein stitch, backstitch, Spanish work, festoon stitch, square stitch, or double-running stitch. By counting the threads, the double-running stitch is a series of two 'journeys'. On the first journey, the pattern is to work every other stitch. Then on the return journey, fill in the blank spots to create one continuous line. A slate frame should be used for this type of embroidery. It is historically accurate, as well as not having to worry about warping the tension on the fabric or embroidery thread. Circular hoop frames did not become popular until the 18th century with tambour work.

In the Canterbury Tales, Geoffrey Chaucer commented on the clothing of the miller's wife, Alison. "Of white, too, was the dainty smock she wore, Embroidered at the collar all about With coal-black silk, alike within and out." (Chaucer 105)

William Shakespeare even described blackwork in his works. In Pericles, Act V, Sc. I, l.5 Shakespeare wrote:

"...with her needl composes
Nature's own shape of bud, bird, branch, or berry,
That even her art sisters the natural roses;
Her inkle, silk, twin wit the rubied cherry:
That pupils lacks she none of noble race
Who pour their bounty on her..."
